1 I. SUMMARY.

2 Plaintiffs' response is a red flag. Their damage-causation theory is one that has 3 never been recognized in all of DFR jurisprudence. Plaintiffs continue to fail to cite a 4 single DFR case proving otherwise. Instead, they obfuscate the shortcomings of their 5 theory with a cloud of citations to, of course, the Restatement. This Court has well said, 6 "you can't get much higher level of generality than the restatements" (Tr. 07/07/09 at 7 38:25-39:1) and Judge Posner would agree. Take away the "crutch of the Restatement ...
8 that antiquated screed" that plaintiffs cling to, and their theory collapses. Jansen v.
9 Packaging Corp. of Am., 123 F.3d 490, 510 (7th Cir. 1997).¹ It collapses because it is 10 inconsistent with the basic precepts of the Duty that are grounded in national labor 11 policy, which courts are to apply and not rewrite.
12

13 Plaintiffs' theory is that USAPA is liable after certification for DFR damages
14 caused before certification by individuals supposedly acting in concert with a union not 15 yet representing anyone. Plaintiffs brandish this joint liability theory under the sophistry
16 of a "but for cause" personal negligence damages analysis. But the applicable DFR case
17 law clearly holds just the opposite: a union is liable under the Duty only for conduct taken 18 pursuant to its representational status. Allow plaintiffs to circumvent this well-
19 demarcated line defining the scope of the Duty with their limitless but-for-cause theory
20 and that line is erased.
21

23 ¹ This Court has previously commented that "Judge Posner is pretty good dictum." (Tr. 10/29/08 at 167:9).

1 There could be no clearer invitation for this Court to rewrite national labor policy,
2 but as Chief Justice Burger once explained, that is not the role of the judiciary.

3 The temptation to exceed our limited judicial role and do what we regard as 4 the more sensible thing is great, but it takes us on a slippery slope. Our 5 duty, to paraphrase Mr. Justice Holmes in a conversation with Judge
6 Learned Hand, is not to do justice but to apply the law and hope that justice 7 is done.

8 Bifulco v. United States, 447 U.S. 381, 402 (1980) (Burger, C.J., concurring) (emphasis 9 added). Allowing plaintiffs' damage claim would necessarily impose liability on a non-10 representing union. And, in the process, on individual employees who cannot be held 11 liable under the Duty, or merely for exercising statutorily protected rights under the RLA.
12 Dismissal is thus required to uphold the integrity of federal labor policy and law.

13 II. ARGUMENT

14 A. Plaintiffs Offer a Strained Analysis of the Twombly-Ashcroft Standard.

15 Plaintiffs downplay the impact of Twombly and Ashcroft by claiming the Supreme 16 Court merely "clarif[ied] that Rule 8 'demands more than an unadorned ... accusation.'" (Doc. # 624 at 3). But whether the impact is characterized as a "sea change" or just a 17 change, the fact is that the Conley no-set-of-facts standard that prevailed for the previous 18 four decades is out, replaced by a tougher "plausibility" standard. Indeed, the Supreme 19 Court in Ashcroft reversed a lower court that misinterpreted Twombly as not much of a 20 change. 129 S. Ct. at 1953.

21 Two things are thus apparent: first, plaintiffs would not need to downplay Ashcroft
22 if they could meet it; second, they cannot satisfy Ashcroft because, exactly like the 23 reversed plaintiffs in Ashcroft, their new claim – assuming this Court were to recognize it

1 as cognizable in the first place – is entirely dependent on discovery to overcome pure
2 speculation: first, that concerted action led to the East pilots doing what they had an 3 overwhelming self-interest to do on their own, protect their vested seniority from a
4 widely perceived threat, and second, that a CBA would have been negotiated and happily
5 ratified by the arbitrary time that plaintiffs need to fit their case. But speculative 6 conclusions do not “unlock the doors of discovery.” Id. at 1950. “We decline
7 respondent’s invitation to relax the pleadings requirements on the ground that the Court
8 of Appeals promises petitioners minimally intrusive discovery.” Id. at 1953. Yet 9 plaintiffs are utterly dependent on discovery because they have no facts to allege that 10 plausibly show the impossible: that the East MEC needed USAPA to reject Nicolau. And 11 for plaintiffs to say they can meet the plausibility standard because they have alleged 12 “specific allegations” is nothing more than saying they have alleged sharper conclusions

14 B. Plaintiffs’ Damage-Causation Theory is Predicated on Pre-Certification
15 Conduct, but DFR Causation does not Flow from Pre to Post-Certification.

16 Plaintiffs’ response serves to highlight that their damage-causation theory is based 17 entirely on pre-certification conduct:

- 18 • Prior to April 18, 2008, members of the East MEC and other East Pilot
19 rank-and-file solicited support for USAPA with the intention of preventing 20 the Airline from integrating operations using a Nicolau CBA. (Doc. # 624 at 21 1:19-21) (emphasis added).
- 21 • “USAPA was integrally involved in the actions taken by members of the 22 East MEC and East Pilot rank-and-file prior to April 18, 2008.” (Doc. # 624 23 at 2:3-4) (emphasis added);
- 22 • “Prior to April 18, 2008, therefore, the opposition to the Nicolau Award was 23 concerted action.” (Doc. # 624 at 7:20-21) (emphasis added);

- 1 • “[W]hen USAPA encouraged the East Pilot Enterprise prior to April 18, and 2 when it breached its DFR after April 18, it acted with the privity and 3 knowledge of persons involved in the East Pilot Enterprise.” (Doc. # 624 at 4 9:9-12) (emphasis added).
- “[P]rior to April 18, USAPA promised to abrogate the Nicolau Award if 5 elected.” (Doc. # 624 at 9:14-15) (emphasis added).

6 Plaintiffs make a feeble attempt to tie their pre-certification causation theory into the 7 post-certification period by arguing that USAPA ratified the pre-certification acts after it
8 was certified. (Doc. # 624 at 10:2-3). But case law has squarely rejected similar 9 attempts to revivify pre-certification DFR claims in the post-certification period.

10 In McNamara-Blad v. Ass’n of Prof’l Flight Attendants, 275 F.3d 1165 (9th Cir.
11 2002), the Ninth Circuit examined whether a union had violated its DFR to incoming 12 members when, in the wake of an airline merger, it negotiated a seniority arrangement 13 that entailed the flight attendants of the smaller carrier.

14 This case arose after American Airlines agreed to purchase 80% of Reno Airlines’
15 outstanding shares. Id. at 1168. At the time of acquisition, the American flight
16 attendants were represented by the Association of Professional Flight Attendants
17 (“APFA”) and the Reno flight attendants were represented by the Teamsters. Shortly 18 after the acquisition, the APFA began seniority negotiations with American, which 19 eventually resulted in an agreement entailing the incoming Reno flight attendants. Id. at 20 1169.

21 This agreement was consummated prior to the NMB’s determination that the two 22 airlines constituted a single carrier. Shortly after the single carrier determination, the 23 Reno flight attendants brought suit against APFA contending that it breached its post-

1 merger duty of fair representation by implementing the unfavorable seniority agreement.
2 The Ninth Circuit affirmed the trial court's dismissal, holding that because APFA
3 reached the agreement prior to the NMB's single carrier determination, it owed no duty
4 to the incoming Reno flight attendants. Id. at 1172. Therefore, there could be no DFR
5 breach based on pre-certification conduct – even though its effect was felt post-
6 certification.

8 In making its determination, the Ninth Circuit endorsed the NLRB's finding in 9 Riser Foods, Inc., 309 N.L.R.B. 635 (1992). Id. at 1173. In that case, as explained by 10 the Ninth Circuit, two companies merged and the surviving union insisted that the 11 incoming unit be endtailed. The company refused and dovetailed the employees. After 12 the merger, the union threatened a slowdown unless the company endtailed the smaller 13 pre-merger group. Those employees argued that the union's demand violated its DFR.
14 The NLRB rejected this contention, and the Ninth Circuit agreed that a union's DFR is 15 not implicated where it "implements a position that it adopted before the new employees
16 became members in the union's statutory bargaining unit." Id. (citing Riser Foods, 309 17 N.L.R.B. at 636).

18 The Reno flight attendants certainly had an argument that but-for its union's 19 conduct in negotiating a seniority agreement that endtailed them, they would not have 20 suffered damages. The same can be said for the employees in Riser Foods.
21 Nevertheless, liability – and therefore causation – were not allowed to pass through the 22 line of demarcation separating pre and post-certification conduct.
23

1 The same result was reached more recently by the Third Circuit in Bensel v. Allied
2 Pilots Ass'n, 387 F.3d 298 (3d Cir. 2004). This case arose following American Airlines'
3 asset purchase of Trans World Airlines (TWA). Prior to the takeover, the TWA pilots
4 were represented by ALPA and the American pilots were represented by the Allied Pilots
5 Association (APA). The American pilots were the larger group. As in McNamara-Blad, 6 APA negotiated a seniority integration agreement with American, which for the most 7 part, entailed the TWA pilots. The agreement was reached prior to a single carrier
8 determination. The former TWA pilots, following the certification of APA, brought suit 9 based on this agreement.
10

11 The Bensel plaintiffs' complaint was based on the pre-certification seniority
12 agreement and the allegation that the DFR breach had continued post-certification with 13 APA's failure "to negotiate a fair and equitable integration of the TWA pilots." Bensel v.
14 Allied Pilots Ass'n, 271 F. Supp. 2d 616, 625 (D.N.J. 2003). The district court, as 15 affirmed by the Third Circuit, rejected this claim outright. Id. at 625-626.

16 Again, the TWA pilots certainly had an argument that the pre-certification
17 seniority agreement negotiated by APA was the "but-for" cause of their loss of seniority
18 and resulting damages that occurred after certification. Nevertheless, the Third Circuit
19 followed the Ninth Circuit's decision in McNamara-Blad, and rejected the argument that 20 pre-certification conduct could form the basis of post-certification liability.
21
23

1 This rule of law has also been applied outside of the merger context. In Baggarly v.
2 United Steelworkers of Am., 142 L.R.R.M. 2108 (W.D. Ky. 1991), Local 4959 of the 3 United Steelworkers represented over 250 employees at a steel plant in Kentucky. In 4 1985, the plant was forced to close. The employees were left without jobs and they 5 retired, resigned or were laid off. Thereafter, Local 4959 ceased to have any members.

6 Two years later, Local 4959 together with civic leaders and state officials worked
7 to secure investors to reopen the plant. Id. at *2. They were successful and convinced
8 the company to restart operations. Prior to the reopening, Local 4959 negotiated a CBA
9 with the company intended to cover future employees of the plant. The agreement did 10 not require the company to staff the plant with the prior workforce, nor did it recognize 11 prior service at the closed plant. Id. at *3.

12 After the plant was reopened and the prior workforce recalled, it became evident
13 that workers were not being recalled on the basis of their prior seniority. Id. at *4. These 14 employees filed a DFR action based on the union's negotiation of the new CBA. The 15 court dismissed the DFR claim because the union had negotiated the agreement at a time
16 when it had no members and owed no duty of fair representation to anybody. Id. at 23-17 25.

19 [I]t appears that at the time the union bargained with [the company], there 20 were no persons in the status of "employees" who had duly selected or 21 designated the union to bargain on their behalf. There thus existed no
22 bargaining unit for whom the union could serve as the exclusive bargaining
23 representative. There being no exclusive representative, and no
"constituency" on whose behalf the union was acting, there is no one to whom the union owed the duty of fair representation. Accordingly, all claims against the union for breach of the duty must fail.

1 Id. at 24. Once again, a court declined to allow pre-certification conduct to form the 2 basis of a post-certification DFR – even where the actions were most certainly the but-
3 for-cause of the plaintiffs’ alleged injuries.

4 The law to be applied is clear: pre-certification conduct does not form the basis of 5 a DFR. The Duty is tied to a union’s representational status. That is the law according to 6 the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit. Simo v. Union of Needletrades, 316 F.3d 974, 7 983 (9th Cir. 2003). Any theory of damages that violates that rule is an expansion of the 8 scope of liability beyond what controlling precedent allows.

10 C. A Completed and Ratified October 2008 CBA is Inherent Speculation.

11 In order to withstand a motion to dismiss, “factual allegations must be enough to 12 raise a right to relief above the speculative level.” Williams ex rel. Tabiu v. Gerber
13 Products Co., 523 F.3d 934, 938 (9th Cir. 2008) (quoting Bell Atlantic v. Twombly, 550
14 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). Even assuming, arguendo, that plaintiffs’ damage (liability 15 expansion) theory survives the legal impediments discussed herein, there are no damages
16 unless there would have been a single CBA in place on a date certain that included the 17 Nicolau Award. USAPA has previously discussed, at length, why plaintiffs’ allegation of 18 October 2008 is not only speculative but entirely implausible. (See Doc. # 488 at 6-10; 19 Doc. # 512 at 4-7).

21 Plaintiffs now argue, with respect to ratification, that it “is entirely plausible that ...
22 if given the opportunity to vote on a Nicolau CBA a majority of East Pilots would have 23 voted in favor so that they could obtain the better pay and benefits that would come with it.” (Doc. # 624 at 6:2-6). Plaintiffs argue that the economics of the Kirby Proposal

1 would have enticed East Pilots into voting for a single CBA with the Nicolau Award
2 because, in their words, it “is common sense that workers would vote for better wages
3 and benefits.” (Doc. # 624 at 6:5-6). Not only is this speculative but it is actually
4 contrary to the evidence in the record. The East and West MECs considered the proposal
5 to be “woefully inadequate”² and a document disclosed by plaintiffs after the trial
6 reinforces the inadequacies of the proposal to both pilot groups.³ Moreover, plaintiffs 7 already stipulated prior to the liability trial that a “majority of East Pilots strenuously
8 objected to the Nicolau Award and were opposed to its implementation.” (Doc. # 417 at 9 5, ¶ 17). Now, plaintiffs argue that the same majority of East Pilots would have ratified a 10 single CBA that included Nicolau. This takes speculation into the realm of fantasy. This 11 is the same majority that supposedly formed itself “illegally” taking the unheard-of step 12 of dumping ALPA after 40 years. And this ‘tyranny of the majority’ was prepared to be 13 bought off for a few “woefully inadequate” bucks?

15 D. Plaintiffs Seek an Unwarranted Expansion of DFR Injury-Causation.

16 “[F]ederal courts have consistently required a direct nexus between breach of [the] 17 duty and resultant damages to the individual or minority segment . . .” Deboles v. Trans
18 World Airlines, Inc., 552 F.2d 1005, 1018 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 837 (1977)
19

20 _____
21 ² See Doc. # 489 at p. 11, ¶ 21.

22 ³ In a February 22, 2008 draft letter from West MEC Chairman John McIlvenna to East
23 MEC Chairman Jack Stephan proposing an interim separate operation agreement (i.e., two contract solution), Mr. McIlvenna wrote that the “May 2007 Kirby Proposal . . . was deemed unacceptable by both pilot groups.” (See Exhibit A). Plaintiffs have argued that it is proper for this Court to consider extrinsic evidence when deciding this motion.
(Doc. # 624 at 1, n. 2).

1 (emphasis added); Acri v. Int'l Ass'n of Machinists, 781 F.2d 1393, 1397 (9th Cir. 1986).
2 This DFR injury causation test is “difficult to satisfy, and rightly so.” Ackley v. Western
3 Conf. of Teamsters, 985 F.2d 1463 (9th Cir. 1992), because in the absence of a causal
4 connection between the union’s conduct and plaintiffs’ alleged injuries, “any remedy
5 against the union would necessarily be a punishment.” Deboles, 552 F.2d at 1019. And 6 punitive damages are forbidden in DFR actions. Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers v. Foust, 442
7 U.S. 42 (1979); Peterson v. Air Line Pilots Ass'n, 759 F.2d 1161, 1167 (4th Cir. 1985).

9 Notwithstanding the requirement of a direct nexus between a breach of the Duty 10 and resulting damages, plaintiffs actually argue in their response that “a union that 11 willfully breaches its DFR” should be held liable “for all harm – even harm that was not 12 directly caused by the DFR breach.” (Doc. # 624 at 10:10-11) (emphasis added). This is 13 another bright red flag. Plaintiffs either: 1) ignored case law detailing DFR injury 14 causation, or 2) were aware of the law and recognized that trying to fit their damage
15 theory into it was like forcing a square peg into a round hole. Either way, plaintiffs’
16 response, and specifically their argument that USAPA is liable for “harm that was not 17 directly caused by the DFR breach,” sums up their damage theory quite well, and 18 demonstrates how, once again, plaintiffs ask that the law be rewritten to support their 19 claim.
20
21
22
23

1 E. Plaintiffs Failed to Respond to Valid Arguments.

2 Finally, plaintiffs' response does not address all of the motion. Grounds three 3 through nine are ignored by plaintiffs. To that extent, those grounds should be regarded 4 either as waived or unanswerable.

5 III. RELIEF REQUESTED.

6 Based on the pleadings, evidence, arguments, record, and any testimony, or 7 evidence to be presented in the hearing, USAPA respectfully requests that the Court grant 8 its motion and dismiss plaintiffs' second amended complaint with prejudice.
